The Digestibility of Fish.

The red-blooded fish, such, for instance, as salmon, herring and mackerel, are highly nutritious, but not easily digested, partly be ributed through the fish. White fish, such as cod, haddock, turbot halibut and flounder, contain comparatively little fat, and that mostly in the liver. They are easy or digestion and possess a delicat flavor. When in season and just from their native element they are delicious and make excellent food for the sick, on account of this

Tatiana Tolstoi.

Counters Tatiana Tolstol is the cident daughter of the author of the "Kreutner Scnata" and her father's right hand and secretary. She belps him in all his work, and attempts, as far as in her lies, to restrate his wilder vagaries. Although she cannot sympathize with much that her father does, and is especially distressed at his latest mante his literary work, and is never so happy as when taking down from his dictation por-tions of his stories. Counters Tatiana, although not good looking in the ordinary sense of the word, is a bright, intelligent-looking girl. She has never been presented at court and has only spent one Winter in St. Petersburg, but she is thoroughly well educated and can both read, write and speak French and English fluently. Those who visit the Count at Yashaya Poliana are mostly entertained by his oldest daughter, for his wife is very much occupied with household cares and copying out her husband's manuscripta
